EXPERIENCE PROFILE

Jeff McIntyre is a shareholder in the Madison office of Whyte Hirschboeck Dudek where he is a member of the Litigation and Intellectual Property Litigation Practice Groups. Mr. McIntyre concentrates his practice in business and intellectual property litigation, and has represented clients in complex commercial, patent infringement, trademark infringement, dealership, construction and product liability disputes.

Prior to Mr. McIntyre's legal career, he designed and developed an implantable drug delivery system, for which he and a co-inventor were awarded Patent No. 4,762,517. Mr. McIntyre formed a company to market this and other medical devices, successfully completed a human clinical trial and obtained marketing clearance for the device from the U.S. Food and Drug Administration. Mr. McIntyre's subsequent consulting practice in medical device regulatory affairs and marketing led him to the legal profession.

As a lawyer, he has:

- Participated in numerous trials venued in Illinois, New York, Texas and Wisconsin.
- First-chaired patent infringement trials in the Western District of Wisconsin involving electro-mechanical and biotechnology subject matter.
- Successfully defended, as a member of the joint defense team, the largest firearms manufacturer in the country in the landmark case, Hamilton v. Accu-Tek.
- Successfully defended the country's largest residential real estate investment trust in a dispute over a claimed $1 million+ consulting fee arising from a $1 billion dollar merger.
- Successfully defended a recreational equipment manufacturer accused of patent infringement by a competitor in a jury trial tried to verdict.
- Successfully defended a manufacturer of recreational vehicles accused of trademark infringement by a competitor.
